Plain Talk about Business in California

The following is from the Sacramento [illegible] San Francisco money and business article:

Financial and commercial affairs in this city have assumed such a serious aspect that those who claim the right to mold public opinion have at last woke up and are considering what is the matter with us. But they are so imbued with the notions of '49 that, like Rip Van Winkle, they can not realize the changed condition of affairs in California during their doze of twenty years. They can't see that everything here is on stilts and requires to be brought down to the level ground of common business principles. They think that immigration is a panacea for all our financial and commercial troubles. They have not opened their eyes to the fact that we have more people here now than can find profitable employment.

The Chamber of Commerce says we want immigrants, and all the city papers reiterate the idea, and a society, including among its directors most of the large landholders, has been organized to encourage immigration, and for this purpose everybody who has land for sale is invited to send particulars and price to the society and to pay five per cent. of the value of said land, for the purpose of aiding the distribution of information about California among the laboring classes in Europe and the Atlantic States.

Did ever sane men propose a more insane plan for such a purpose? Unless the men we want to come here are idiots, the price of land, the rental of money, the cost of transportation, the value of the products of the soil and the expense of coming here are sufficient to deter them. It is cruel to strangers and folly toward ourselves to endeavor to make it appear that land, labor or money are really more valuable here than elsewhere. The present condition of the State, with its manufactures idle, its mechanics, artisans and laborers unemployed, its mines yielding but a per cent. of former years, and its farmers selling their products for less than it cost to raise and send them to market, are sad effects of the attempt to carry out such a delusion.

If we want to make California a great agricultural and manufacturing State, we must be prepared to sell wheat, or any other article we raise or make, as cheaply as they can be made or raised elsewhere. When we can do this, then California, with its sunny skies and genial climate, will afford employment and happy homes for millions of industrious people, and immigrants will come to us of their own volition, and trade will be active. But so long as the lending of money to speculators is the most lucrative business, and the speculators can control the farmers, and import goods to undersell our local manufacturers, if we gave free passage to immigrants their presence would not improve affairs. Before anything like healthy business progress can be inaugurated it is necessary to recognize the fact that California is no longer an isolated community; and we must learn to conform our business to that of our neighbors and competitors. The ability to corner all the soap, candles and codfish, when supplies came round the Horn, is not much use now that Chicago, New York or Boston can flood us with any article within ten days after the order for them is sent, and at a price less than it used to cost via the Isthmus.

An amusing illustration of the proneness of the San Francisco papers to flatter its patrons was presented during the past week. It appears that the Mormons have an extensive sugar plantation at the Sandwich Islands, from which about ten tons of raw sugars were recently sent to this city. Being unfit for use without refining, and having no refinery at Salt Lake, Brigham Young very sensibly had it refined here. The shipment of this sugar to Salt Lake set the Bulletin aglow with pleasure, and it stated on the strength of this event that somebody had said (it did not state who) that San Francisco could command the trade for sugar in all markets west of Omaha, and being a "commercial paper," the Bulletin was much gratified at the idea. When it is stated that the best New York refined sugar is selling at Chicago for 15@16c per lb in currency, while San Francisco brands are held at 15c in gold, and supplies can be brought from Chicago to Salt Lake at $3 per 100 lbs in currency, while it costs $6 per 100 in gold to send it from this city, the idea of competition on such a basis is supremely ridiculous.

Josh Billings at Long Branch

The best description of this fashionable bathing place is that of Josh Billings. In a letter he says:

Arrived here jest in time tew see the Atlantic Ocean, which is now on exhibishun and doing a good bizziness tew full houses. Took a bath tew onst, and was astonished tew find the water so salturous. Inquired the kause ov an intelligent natif, and he informed me that he didn't care. I think the cuss lied. There is about one hundred and sixty thousand human beings and other folks here now, az near az I can estimate. I kounted till I got tired, and then I estimated. It is perfectly heart renting tew see the feemails here in search ov natural protecktors. I kounted sixteen yesterday in one pile, they awl sighed as I past bi them, with downcast eyes. I felt sorry for them for I am thoroughly married and intend tew remain so. There iz two breezes here, a sea breeze and a jerzee breeze, and I advise awl persons to use the sea breeze, for the other iz so used up before it reaches here that it soon uses up everybody after it gets here. Shoddy and Petroleum are both here, and excite ez much notise ez a patent churn, warrunted tew make butter in ten minutes from skimmed milk, but they say they shant remain long bekause the air smells so much like old brine. Yesterday I went out krabbing and ketched a peck ov them. They bite sideways, and hang on like a dead huss shoe. They make good vittols enuff; but they ain't proffitable tew eat if you kount your time with anything. They have a kurious bug here which they call the muskoto. They roam about in herds, and are much respected bi the inhabitants. I kaught one ov them day befour yesterday, a sticking something sharp into me and karried it into mi room and smashed it on the sil. The bathing is luxurius, and the bathers resemble mermaids, half men and half woman; and they dress in the Choctaw kostum, and when they emerge from the water, you can't tell which iz which unless you ask them. After bathing you feel a kind of larkness and limberness, for which I was advised to bathe in whiskee. I took one immershun, about a tumbler, and never felt so stout in my life. I felt I could lift an aker of their land, but bimeby, after the licker had let go I felt as though I could foller an angle worm into his hole, and hadn't strength enough to ask a dog to foller me. If I ever drink any more jerseewhiskee it will be after I am dead and gone. There is one church here, but it would hold so few that nobody never go out of politeness. There is 21 hotels, and they are principally built out of doors, so as to give the guests as much brizaquonsair as possible. The lodging rooms are small, but handy, each one has a door to them and a looking glass on the wal, and two wash bowls and a towel. Dinner is served at two o'clock, opens with soup, and shuts up with huckleburry. The servants are generally blak, but many of them have lived so long among the whites that they begin tew adopt our kuller. The beach, by moonlite, is worthy of a philosopher. Lovers meet here from aul parts of the country to vow and sware, and many a heart cums here tuff, and goes home smashed, and bleeding at every pour.

But the grand attrakshun is the Atlantic Ocean, a great hemisphere ov liquid life and power, blue water everywhar the eye kan reach, az gentle az a summer evening mill pond, and then again, az awful az a water earthquake. Upon the whole, Long branch iz a reusable place to visit. I think there iz az little nonsenz there generally az the same number of visitors are capable ov.

The prospect of a general disarrangement in Europe, about which the great powers are now negotiating, cannot but direct the attention of the people to the burden which half a dozen men, for their own private interests, impose upon them. The annual cost of the armies of Europe at this time, as acknowledged in the financial budgets of the various Governments, is $530,000,000 in gold. The annual interest on the various war debts is $253,000,000 more. But in addition, two millions eight hundred thousand men, the flower of the people of Europe, are kept under arms year after year, idly awaiting the orders of their sovereigns. The loss by the waste of labor is estimated to be at least one million of dollars a day, in addition to the cost of maintaining the armed idlers. It is thus within the truth to state that the actual cost to Europe of war and warlike preparations in time of peace, is fifteen hundred millions of dollars. Remove this dead weight from the people and there would no longer be a necessity for poverty or an apology for crime.

The Worship of God in Music

By [illegible]

Much has lately been written with reference to "congregational singing," the "annoyances of choirs," the godlessness of "quartettes," and a dozen other ills which fret the souls of men and women in an unusual way. Indeed it would seem to be, were some writers and talkers the devil seems to have possession of one end of the Church while the minister holds the other end, to the mourning of the congregation, and an emotional struggle between the two which is kept up for two or three hours on Sunday. It is not my purpose to dispute the truthfulness of these points. On the contrary, I believe that what has been stated is more than half correct, but the question which has frequently arisen in my mind, is whether or not there may be some means of escape from the disagreeable position, without altogether relinquishing an attendance upon church services, and also whether or not some of the unpleasantness may be due to the fact, that congregations, instead of worshiping God in and through music, resolve themselves into assemblages of critics ready to pick at flaws, but never intend to praise the Master nor to discover the spirit of adoration in the anthems sung by others.

The fact is, judging from observation, the great cry of complaint very generally arises in those congregations that lack sympathy in singing. In proof of this, let the reader look at the faces which compose the audiences of many church es while the choir is singing, and the result will be a sight which will make the mind wonder at the listless, expressionless countenances before him. The sentiments of the hymn may be those of gratitude for the joys of religion, but no emotions of pleasure light up the features of many of the worshipers. Some assume a weary attitude as if it were hard work to remain standing while the four verses are being sung, some do not stand at all, but remain seated, as though they were not able to make the exertion necessary to arise upon their feet, some gaze from point to point, eager to see the changes in countenances and the entrance of those who are late, some look as though they had "no part or parcel" in the songs of God; and others shrug their shoulders at occasional discords, and finally sit down, relieved when the music ceases. A few sing with the "heart and the understanding."

Does any one suppose that such worship is acceptable to God? Does any one dream that this means anything like praising Him in the congregation? May it not be that the singing by the choir is credited to the choir alone? And may it not be that the recording angel writes down the lamentable fact that not one sixteenth of the whole Church have the disposition to lift up their poor souls above their pews?

In view of this state of affairs, I positively assert that it is the duty of all Christians to sing, sing so willingly and powerfully, so warmly and feelingly, that no one will think of discords, nor indeed care for them! This is the kind of music which has the wings of adoration. This is the kind of music which mounts upward like the eagle, instead of flopping and floundering in the swamps, like a blundering bittern! And it is such music which takes the spirit of the pastor and bears it upward to altitudes from which he catches a view of the glories of heaven, while he stands transfigured to the glory of the Saviour, and speak with an energy which darts like an electric flash from soul to soul!

Enter our Sunday Schools while the children are singing. Does anybody think of discord? By no means! Little Tommy is a quarter of a tone below the key, and so is Nellie, but no one knows anything about the matter. The grand gush of harmony is so powerful and beautiful as to swallow up those little defects, and to round the rough notes into an aggregate of sweetness! Happiness is written on every face! Meaning is in every note! Worship is in every tone! Heart and soul are in every nook and corner of the room! Away with the formal, soulless music of the congregation! It needs the sunshine which pervades the Sunday School. It is sadly in want of earnestness. Look at that boy down yonder in the class. Watch his upturned face, all aglow with the joy that fills his heart, notice his enraptured looks. Do you suppose that a thought of sports or of mischief is in his mind at this moment! Nut There is no lip service there! He is truthful at this moment, if never again.

I would not turn Church services into Sunday School exercises, but I would advocate the idea that every professor of religion should sing both from a sense of love and duty. If such a course were to be adopted, we should hear less of this grumbling about choirs and organists. Never shall I forget a little experience of my own touching this very point. I had for many months attended church only to find myself annoyed by poor singing, and at last became nervous and fidgetty over the subject. To tell the truth, I continually listened with the expectation of hearing "discords" and "flats" and "breaks." Oh! how the perspiration stood upon my forehead, sometimes, when a large number of strangers were present, for they were almost certain to look around at our choir, as much as to say, "Where on earth do those tones come from?" One evening a very large audience was present. The first hymn was sung by the choir in an execrable manner, very few of the congregation joining in singing. I was vexed! I did not see the beautiful sentiments in the poetry! I did not feel a religious emotion! I believe that I could have seen the whole choir sink through the floor with no small degree of satisfaction! In the meantime, a poor negro came in, and was seated in a pew near me. When the second hymn had been given out, I prepared myself for another state of "madness." The choir began in the same disagreeable style! But hark! There was a new voice in the audience added to the music. It rose, clear and beautiful above the expressionless notes of the choir. It was filled with a pathos which seemed almost divine. My ear followed it in its flight. Almost unconsciously I began to sing. I forgot my vexation and nervousness, and for once, at least, my soul worshiped God in Music! The old negro had preached me a sermon which I cannot forget. He had sung with the "heart and the understanding."

Let us all stop grumbling and begin to sing. Let musical committees of churches secure the best choirs and the most skillful organists which their means will afford, and then let Christians remember that these are but mere accessories which, under no circumstances, are to take the place of individual duty. From the first note of the voluntary to the closing strain of the doxology, thought, mind and soul should take wings upon themselves. Sometimes it seems that it would be better to be the poor ignorant Catholic counting his beads and chanting his "Ave Maria," with a steady but blind purpose, than to be the enlightened professor of religion, upon whose passionless spirit the music of the sanctuary falls without awakening any response! Who are those who shall be considered fit to stand before the throne and cry, "Holy! Holy! Holy! Lord God Almighty!" Who are those who shall take up the everlasting anthems of heaven and praise the All Father? Certainly not those of us who are too indolent to sing while we are upon the earth—we who cavil and find fault—we of whom it cannot be said, "There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard." —Musical Bulletin.

A BABY STABBED TO THE HEART.—One of the most singular accidents we have had to record for many a year occurred at the residence of Mr. Vinage, near Jones Station, on the line of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad, last Tuesday night.

A married daughter, who lives in Kentucky, was on a visit to her old homestead with her child, some seventeen months old. The little one being hungry asked for a piece of bread which the mother ordered the servant girl to get.

The latter picked up the child in her arms, took a long carving-knife from the cupboard, and started down the cellar steps to the place where the bread was kept. In going down her foot slipped, and as she fell the knife stood point upward on the steps, the blade of which penetrated the heart of the child, producing instant death. The pen fails to depict the grief of the almost heart-broken mother when the corpse of her darling babe was brought into her presence. The house which only a moment before was a scene of joy and festivity was, by the singular accident, turned into a place of mourning and sorrow.—Cincinnati Times, Oct. 16.

Abraham Lincoln and Isaac V. Fowler.

[From the Providence Journal.]

Isaac V. Fowler, who fled from New York in 1860, a defaulter to a considerable amount has recently died. He was a man of marked ability, of brilliant social talents, had many friends, and was one the leaders of the Democratic party, being Grand Sachem of Tammany. He was appointed Postmaster by Pierce and in 1856 he yielded to the persuasion of his friends, and to their promises of indemnity, and employed the public money to carry Pennsylvania for Buchanan. The promises were not kept, and after bearing his terrible secret for four years, exposure became inevitable and he fled. Great efforts were made to procure his pardon from Mr. Lincoln, but the President was firm. "What is it," he said to a friend of Mr. Fowler, who came to the White House with a petition signed by many of the most distinguished men of all parties, praying for the pardon of Fowler, "What is it that gilds that magnificent crime? Why do ex-Governors, and members of the Legislature, and clergymen, and editors, and merchants, and lawyers, all write to ask that the man shall be exempted from the penalty of his crime?

"Is not this an evidence that he cannot be a bad man? Do bad men have so many and such friends?"

"I do not understand that their friendship carries them so far as to refund the money which he took from the Government, and by which some of his political friends were largely benefited. Let them come with that, and they will furnish an evidence of their sincerity which will give them a claim for a hearing."

"But think how much he has suffered already in his long exile. I really believe that the Penitentiary would be a milder punishment than that which he constantly endures."

"Then let him come back, that is all that he can suffer here."

"But don't you think, Mr. President, that a man may suffer more from his own reflections than he can from any legal punishment?"

"Very likely; moralists and philosophers have always told us so. I never heard of a government that relied upon that sort of suffering as a sufficient restraint upon crime."

With all his kindly sympathies, Mr. Lincoln was constrained by public motives, apart from any general consideration upon the punishment of crime, to refuse permission for Mr. Fowler to return to the country. But when the time came that this act of clemency could be safely extended to him, a nolle prosequi was entered in his case, Mr. Fowler showed his grateful appreciation of it by laboring to earn the money with which to settle his indebtedness to the Government, and in this he had gone so far that he expected soon to accomplish it. This does much to atone for his offense, and he will leave behind him a memory more defensible than that of the heartless politicians who betrayed his confidence, led him into crime, took the advantage of it, and then left him to bear the consequences alone.

Promontory and Sodom.

THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE VILLAINOUS HORDES THAT INFEST THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

[From the Elko Independent, Oct. 15.]

The Lord must have become more lenient and patient towards sinners since the destruction of Sodom, or Promontory would have fallen long ago. Sodom had its few, peculiar, besetting sins. Promontory presents a full catalogue, with all the modern improvements, dips, spurs, angles and variations. The low, desperate, hungry, brazen-faced thieves there congregated would contaminate the convicts of any penitentiary in the land. Gamblers shun them; thieves who retain a faint recollection of the innocence of their childhood avoid them as they would small-pox. Railroad men, whose duty requires them there, look out wistfully upon the moral world as the victim of circumstantial evidence peers through the bars of a dungeon on the sunny hills of the material world. The silent but eloquent appeal for relief from the terrors of this lingering concentration of the pestilence which has hung like a pall over the Western world for years, which is written upon the countenances of the few honest men of Promontory, is touching. A remonstrance against the high handed or the sneak thief outrages of these vampires is provocation for the bullet of the desperado, the knife of the assassin or the torch of the incendiary. It would be a mercy to the traveling public, especially that portion coming west, and a relief to the honest mechanics of Promontory and the moral sentiment of the age, if the cleansing element of fire would sweep the town from the face of the earth. These thieves parade their games (mostly three-card monte) in the street near the railroad ticket office and passenger cars, with splendid illuminations and bonfires at night; retain from two to thirty "cappers" about each table, all gotten up in the most approved disguises—some with a roll of blankets, some with carpet sacks, some with lunch satchels and some even with infants in their arms—while the more expert are dispatched down each road every day to ingratiate themselves into the confidence of the unsuspecting on incoming trains. One brave man in Promontory, S. R. Edwards, who is station keeper and has an interest in the Railroad Eating House, had the temerity on Friday evening last to beard these thieves in their stronghold, order them from the passenger platform and warn passengers of their designs. His death may be looked for at any moment, but if he should be murdered or his house burned when a crowd of the right kind of passengers are at or approaching Promontory, there will be a lively time. The railroad companies, who, we believe, own the ground upon which these thieves spread their snares, should compel them to "get back." If Brigham Young would relieve his Territory of this deep disgrace and at the same time end the sufferings of these miserable wretches by a coup de grace, which he knows so well how to inaugurate, he would receive the hearty applause of every Gentile who has passed through Promontory since the completion of the great railroad line.

Returning to a Coin Circulating Medium

As there is much talk in this country at the present time about resumption of specie payments a brief account of the similar event in the financial history of England may be worth attention

The history of the suspension of specie payments in England during the exhausting war which that power waged against Napoleon is interesting Prior to the year 1807 all of the gold coin of the realm had gradually disappeared partly for internal purposes of manufacture and ornament and partly in aid of the external purposes of the war not however openly and directly for this last purpose but the excess of bills drawn by the commissariat and other agents of the government in different parts of the world occasioned these bills to be drawn at a discount of fifteen to twenty per cent, and at such depreciation they became an object of speculation against bullion, in reference to the standard price of gold in England The price of gold was thus raised, by a spirit of speculation and competition, equal to the discount on the bills Such a disparity of values soon led to general derangements in the internal economy of the country Selfish and avaricious individuals availed themselves of the point of law in their favor, which enabled them to demand and enforce payment in gold where an inferior kind of money was implied in the contract In July, 1811, an act was therefore passed making Bank of England notes a legal tender in all payments which heretofore were only so in private transactions and having been accepted as such The title of the act making these notes a legal tender is extremely curious, and illustrates the circumstances under which the act was passed It is as follows, viz - "For making a more effectual provision for preventing the current gold coin of the realm from being paid or accepted for a greater value than the current value of such coin, and for preventing any note or bill of the Bank of England from being received for any smaller sum than the sum therein specified and for staying proceedings upon any distress by tender of such notes" The act was to continue in force for eight months and no longer

Of course it became necessary that the act should be extended. This was done the next year. And before specie payments were resumed in 1823 the act was extended no less than ten times. A measure which, when enacted, was deemed but temporary, was thus continued for twelve years, or, counting from the act of 1797 which made the notes a legal tender in private transactions on agreement between parties, it continued during a period of twenty-six years.

Preparatory to returning to a gold circulating medium, various expedients were tried to bring such a state of affairs about, but for a long time without success. Finally during the years 1821 and 1822 the Bank progressively diminished the issue of its notes until nearly one-third of them were withdrawn from circulation This produced a depression in the money value of all the products of labor, without a parallel in the history of the country, and caused a period of general distress Bankers, merchants and manufacturers, during the space of three years were rapidly added to the lists of insolvency while half a million of families in the manufacturing districts were driven to the verge of starvation.

This brief review of the history of the change in England from a depreciated circulating medium to specie payments may serve to show the difficulty and embarrassment of the contemplated change in our own country It is, indeed, a problem of tremendous magnitude, and we can hardly hope to solve it without producing a stringency in money which will cause the bones of trade to crack and greatly disorganize our whole industrial system

In General

The Eugene Guard makes the following announcement "Our boat is repudiation Who will take a ride!" Jump in, everybody who is anxious for a ride over a political Niagara! Facilis descensus Averni Which being interpreted means that repudiators will find an easy road to the political shades

All work on Holladay's railroad is done in the most complete and substantial manner An inspection of it will convince any one that a road is being built for permanence and real service. No pains or expense is spared to bring it up in every particular to the stand ard of a first class road We are satisfied that there will be no road in the country of superior construction to this one

The Corvallis Mercury thinks the Democratic party of this State will have no trouble in agreeing upon a platform for the next canvass The Eugene Journal suggests that if they cannot agree upon a general platform for the whole State, they can divide up into districts, so as to meet the sentiments of the different localities and in this way probably keep harmonious.

Two members of the Washington Territory Council, Messrs Blinn and Clarke, who claim to be Republicans, but who have been working with the Democrats for some time out of spite to Mr Garfielde and his friends voted last week against resolutions endorsing the administration of President Grant and Republican principles generally They seem to have singular ideas of what it is to be a Republican

Democratic animosity against A Johnson will occasionally 'crop out' The Albany Democrat is of opinion that he was beaten for Senator by the ghost of Mrs Surratt! Wonder if Andy's opponents in the Tennessee Legislature raised this ghost on him? If we may believe the Albany paper he was ready to cry out to them in the language of Macbeth when the ghost of one of his murdered victims rose before him 'Take any shape but that

The little clique of political dead beats who are getting up what they call "workingmen's associations" are taking this course because they see no other way at present of doing anything to mend their political fortunes They may succeed if they can convince intelligent workingmen that the only way to better their condition and get on in the world is to join the politicians labor society quit work and go to spouting on the street corners, in imitation of the example of these illustrious leaders

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press grows eloquent over the region which he denominates the Land of Superior by which term he designates all the country drained by the greatest of the lakes He says that few even of the most intelligent and well informed have any accurate conception of the distances the generous wealth and products the people or the inevitable and impending future of this vast and almost unopened section a magnificent empire yet to be and still but a part and province of one great country

The Herald says of Pendleton's now defunct financial policy Instead of being calculated to sink the party as the experience of successive elections show it is calculated to lift it up to make for it more and more votes as the people more and more understand it [illegible] And this is the way it is done viz Two years ago Hayes Republican was elected Governor of Ohio over Thurman by the meagre majority of 2,983 votes and the Democrats carried both branches of the Legislature In the late battle Hayes beat Pendleton the father of repudiation by 8,078 majority and the Republicans have both branches of the Legislature This is the way Pendleton's financial theories lift up the Democratic party

POLITICAL

The [illegible] very sensibly concludes that the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment is certain and that since the defeat of Pendleton his theory of paying the debt in greenbacks cannot be a feature of party politics

Of all the States in the Union which choose Governors in the fall of the present year only two make changes of chief magistrate Vermont and Minnesota take up with new men but Maine Massachusetts Pennsylvania Ohio Iowa and Wisconsin re elect the present competent and popular Governors

Brick Pomeroy's New York Democrat is philosophical over the recent elections It says that though there comes not the joy which perfect triumph brings there comes that other joy which feeds the fibre for the fight It appears to be rather glad on the whole that this is the case because "the joy from perfect triumph leaves exhaustion from its pure excess

General Grant in a recent letter to Robert Bonner says that if the speculators (in the gold market) had been successful you would never have heard of any one connected with the Administration as being connected with the transaction The malicious ingenuity of disreputable political assailants tortures this language into a confession by the President of complicity with the gold ring! This is the course of the Oregon Herald

The New York World continues its kind advice to Mr. Pendleton and points out to him the absurdity of his aspiring any higher It charges him with loading Mr Seymour with a dead weight in his financial views For some time it has been well known that the New York Democrats did not wish either Mr Pendleton or Mr Packer to succeed this year as they might stand in the way of Gov Hoffman's prospects but this notice to them that they must lay aside their ambition is too unkind, so soon after their defeat in their own States

The Eugene Guard makes the following argument for Democratic principles Grant's administration has done something for which it ought to be remembered—it has caused Lincoln's ugly face to be elegantly engraved on the new fifty cent shinplasters, while the face of Washington is put upon the twenty five cent rags, by which, we suppose, Grant thinks twice as much of Lincoln as he does of Washington We have seen several of those fifty cent stamps with the word 'ass' written with a pen across the forehead of the ape like old rail-splitter

Pendleton confesses to his utter lack of patriotism during the war of the Rebellion At a speech delivered at a meeting to aid in raising a fund for the widows and orphans of soldiers, he said that "the men of Cincinnati, with a fervor of patriotism which was never surpassed left their profitable employments, left their comfortable homes left their wives and their families, left all the endearments of life, at the call of the Government" What shall be said, then, of the man who utterly refused to vote one dollar to aid these patriotic and self sacrificing soldiers? His impudence in appearing before a meeting of men he had uniformly denounced as hirelings, demonstrates that he's the fittest monument of brass to the memory of the late Confederacy

Gov Hayes of Ohio recently received a serenade at Columbus in honor of the Republican victory in that State He responded by saying 'At the beginning of the canvass I supposed the discussion of the canvass would mainly turn upon State issues, but the nomination of the distinguished gentleman who was my competitor and the speech which contained his platform of principles gave to the canvass a national significance The success of Mr Pendleton upon that speech would have signified that a reaction had begun in Ohio on the subject of reconstruction, on the question of repudiation and on the record of the public men who from beginning to end, opposed the war By deciding against Mr Pendleton the people of Ohio have decided to stand by the Republican plan of reconstruction and to complete it by the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States They wish what has been settled to remain settled By this election the people of Ohio have decided to support no man whose principles lead toward repudiation They believe that honesty is the best policy and that there is no half way house between an honest payment of the public debt and repudiation"

INDUSTRIAL ITEMS

The Sacramento Union says that the reason the Pacific States import butter and cheese from the East is that it requires too much capital to begin with here and labor is too high Dairymen can do better it argues, in the older States

The Directors of the Isthmus Railroad Company and the agents of the ocean steamers have recently had a conference with a view to a material reduction of freight charges and especially of those exacted by the Panama Railroad Company The result of the conference has not yet been made public

The San Francisco Alta mentions the arrival of an agriculturist from Japan to study what plants can be sent to America with profit He is hunting up rice to make immediate experiments in its cultivation He brings 4 600 chestnut trees and a bushel of seeds This invoice is for sale and distribution

The Examiner of San Francisco claims that the excessive wheat crop of the Pacific coast is a benefit because it cheapens the price of flour, yet that paper has pursued a line of argument against cheapening the price of labor That to cheapen in one direction is beneficial but in another injurious is a sort of political economy that few will be able to appreciate

For many years anthracite coal has been known to abound in Rhode Island But it was thought to be of so inferior a quality that it was hardly worth mining Now however with the great advance in the price of anthracite and the uncertainty which hangs over that source of supply from the combination of miners and speculators attention has been called anew to the Rhode Island coal beds

The San Francisco Times says The experiment of carrying on business in every branch of industry on the co operative principle is being pretty thoroughly tested Men of limited means band together and with their combined trifles start out on a large scale The last experiment in this line is that of the boot fitters in this city They have united to trade put their funds and labor in one establishment on Sacramento street near Pine and are now flourishing on the tide of success

TWAIN'S BIOGRAPHY —Here is Mark Twain's latest account of himself

I have but little character but what I have I am willing to part with it for the public good I would have been a better man if I had had a chance but things have always been against me I never had parents hardly only just a father and mother —and so I have had to struggle along the best way I could I do not boast of this character further than that I built it up myself at odd hours during the last 90 years and without other educational aid than I was able to pick up in the ordinary schools and colleges

A White Pine paper of a recent date has the following An old black horse said to have been the last of the equine species that crossed the plains with the Fremont expedition, in 1848 ran away with a water cart on Treasure street yesterday and broke his neck His teeth by actual measurement were three and five eighths inches long and persons capable of judging of such matters put his age at about 42 years

A negro named Harrison Faulk has discovered a vein of coal twenty five miles from Roseburg on the North Umpqua river, which promises to supply a want long felt in this part of the Pacific coast Quantities of the new discovery have been tested by blacksmiths and others of Roseburg who unanimously pronounce it equal to the best anthracite coal It burns readily in a blacksmith's furnace and is successfully used in welding

The Walla Walla Union says By a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Oregon the county seat of Umatilla county is permanently located at Pendleton where a fine court house has already been erected through the liberality of the citizens of the county The town site of Pendleton is a beautiful one being on the Umatilla river thirty five miles from the Columbia river and on the stage road to the railroad Its name would seem to be its only drawback

From the Eugene Guard There are two petitions in circulation in this city for the reprieve of penitentiary convicts—one for James Ross sentenced from Douglass county, and the other for Henry Vaughn, from one of the counties east of the mountains Ross was sent to the penitentiary for assaulting Jack Montgomery last spring, and Vaughn for resisting and shooting the sheriff of Umatilla county while attempting to make his arrest some two or three years ago

The late term of the Court of Josephine county lasted only two days There were only three actions involving property not worth fifty dollars and two divorce cases one of which was granted the other postponed Umpqua Joe was indicted for the murder of a white man some time last summer and gave bail for his appearance at the next term of court The Sentinel says Joe has many friends He assisted Fremont in his travels on this coast assisted the whites to fight the Rogue River Indians in 1853 and 1855 6 and he has obtained a land warrant for his services He has been living and mining on Rogue River like a white man ever since the war and his neighbors say he is honest and reliable, and the best citizens in the neighborhood are found on his bond

The Statesman gives the following particulars of the death of a son of W H Baker, near Salem It seems that the boy, a lad of some twelve years, had been helping his father haul apples from the orchard, and at noon got on one of the team horses to ride to water The brook is out of sight of the house, and soon after he had gone there his screams were heard The father and one sister ran to the spot, but the horse had disappeared The other horse went to the barn quietly They commenced a search but were unable to discover anything either of the horse or his ill fated rider Sometime after a neighbor, who knew nothing of the circumstances, found the horse with the dead body of the child still hanging to it. One foot was fastened by a half hitch in the tug which crossing from the opposite side of the animal, was just long enough to allow the little fellow's head to reach the ground When found, he was stripped of all but the shoe and sock on the confined foot Of course death came to his relief almost instantly, which is one poor grain of comfort to the bereaved family

RENTS.—Among the many prevailing causes of tight times, are the enormous rents which are charged for business and dwelling houses in this city. We have little hesitation in saying that the excess in rents above what they should be, costs the laborer and the consumer, from ten to twenty per cent more for a living than it should cost, everything else considered. The entire living of a man, including shelter, should not cost him over forty to fifty per cent of his earnings. But how stands the matter? Those who are dependent upon day wages, and weekly, monthly or yearly salaries, do not get over an average of $80 per month, from which deduct lost time, and the average will be little more than $50. There are few families of four or five persons who can clothe and feed themselves for a less sum than that; yet there are few renters who pay less than $20 per month for houses of ordinary size and accommodations. It is clear that the rent must be saved by "skimping" in matters of dress and eating. There are to be no luxuries upon the table, days of recreation must be rare, books must be considered among the unattainable blessings, the children must go to the free school or to none, and the most rigid economy must be practiced in all things, to avoid being turned out of doors for arrears of rent. The rents literally eat up the substance of the people. They gnaw away at it, directly, in the cost of their own shelter, and, indirectly, in the cost of clothes, provisions and the necessaries of life, which they must buy of merchants who also have to pay exorbitant rents, but who make it up by charging their customer a per cent on their goods. There are to-day more than a dozen buildings on Front street—good business houses—standing empty, because the rents asked are so high nobody cares to take them; and dozens of buildings in the city, unfit for business purposes, are occupied, because business wont warrant the renting of more costly houses. Business men are driven to high insurance or no insurance at all, because the rates of rent compel them to go into wooden buildings of cheap and insecure structure. So, high rents impede business, make costly goods, costly everything, and bear hardly on the poor; they, indirectly keep some people away, drive others away, and thus hinder the growth and prosperity of the city. If owners would but cease the attempt to get rich in a year, consult but their own interests, and reduce the rates of rent to a fair standard, they would be [illegible] up to the [illegible] and through the growth of [illegible] and the [illegible] ending enhancement of the values of their own property.

[illegible]—A clue to the murderers of the Chinaman on Alder street, is said to have been found.

Work on the United States Postoffice and other buildings has been suspended till the present shower shall be over.

A vote of thanks has been tendered Ben Norden by the Hibernian Benevolent Association for late favors.

Beets weighing 17 and 18 lbs raised by W. P. Watson, of [illegible], are on exhibition at the Postoffice.

Mr. W. Fechheimer, of the law firm of Whally & Fechheimer, starts this morning, overland, to the Eastern states on business.

A [illegible] barber of this city was arrested and examined yesterday before Justice Work on a charge of absorbing [illegible] ship property, after dissolution of the firm.

An insane man from Idaho was brought to this city on Sunday, and on Monday was sent to the Asylum by private parties.

Henry McAllister, lately from Westport, died at the [illegible] Exchange Hotel on Sunday, and was buried to-day by the Masonic Brotherhood, of which he was a member.

The bark [illegible] will haul over to East Portland [illegible] cargo two hundred tons of railroad iron.

Work was [illegible] executed yesterday by the track layers, on the East Side railroad, notwithstanding the heavy dew which was falling during the entire day.

ROLL OF HONOR.—CENTRAL SCHOOL.—Grammar Depart. for the month of October:

1ST GRADE—UNEXCEPTIONABLE DEPORTMENT.

Reynolds, Stuart Snyder, [illegible] Shattuck.

2ND GRADE—GOOD DEPORTMENT.

[illegible], Ualty Brannon, Alice Davis, Emma [illegible], Stella Taylor, Nellie Warren, Sophia Wortmser, [illegible] Anderson, Eddie Barlow, Henry Bloom, George [illegible], Henry Kinkins, Marry Gallick, Victor Hexter, [illegible], Willie Ish, Arthur Johnson, Charles [illegible], Frank Miller, James McGowan, Chas. Warren.

R. K. WARREN, Principal.

FROM COLUMBIA.—From the Walla Walla Union: The [illegible] mill being built by Schnebly & Chapman, about a half mile below town, is progressing rapidly and is hoped will be in running order in six weeks.

Mr. [illegible] Whitman, who arrived here last evening, [illegible] Warrens, informs us that new diggings have been struck about fifteen miles below the town on some [illegible] that empty into the Salmon river. They [illegible] prospecting in several localities, and in almost [illegible] good prospects found. The gold is of a [illegible] quality from anything ever taken out in that [illegible], being very coarse and heavy, and assays $16 60 [illegible]. There is 100 men now at work on the North Fork of Salmon, 20 miles from Warrens and all doing [illegible] well.

We are sorry to see that there is a movement on foot to [illegible] Walla Walla county. The matter must have been [illegible] adroitly and secretly, as the people at large [illegible] nothing about the matter until within a few days [illegible]. But we understand that a petition, with about one [illegible] and fifty names has been sent to Olympia, asking [illegible] division, and for the appointment of certain [illegible] the various offices, and that the county seat be [illegible] at Waitsburg.

THE PROBLEM SOLVED.—Whether a white man can successfully compete with a Chinaman, is no longer a vexed [illegible]. The problem was solved yesterday, by "Capt. [illegible]" and several other Caucasians, who left off [illegible] around on street corners and growling about the [illegible] of Mongolians, and, shouldering the buck and saw, went for the wood piles. They captured the pile of [illegible] Radical and went through it. The Radical was at all refractory and did not manifest the least [illegible] having his work done by a white man. The [illegible] proves indubitably just what we have all [illegible] telling the Caucasian race, that, when they [illegible] a job, they can get one as easily as a Chinaman can. Hereafter we shall have no fears for the success of [illegible] when it bares itself and squares itself [illegible] fair contest with the Mongolian article; and we [illegible] hope to hear less whimpering from timid and tearful kid-gloved laboring men about the awfulness of future prospects. Bully for the Caucasian, say we, and bully again for "Capt. Sharkey" who has with a [illegible] of the buck-saw solved the "great problem of the age." The lesson to Chapman & Co. is, to quit [illegible] and spouting and go for a job.

CIRCUIT COURT—MARQUAM, JUDGE.—Following proceedings had, up to adjournment yesterday:

J. W. Cook vs. Thomas Frazer; judgment by default.

[illegible] Denning vs. A. Grabenheim; a demurrer to [illegible] complaint overruled, and motion filed by [illegible] attorney for judgment.

In Probate.—In the matter of the estate of George Hot[illegible], by prayer of Geo. H. Flanders and Henry [illegible], the surviving executors of the will and testament [illegible], it was ordered that they publish a notice requiring persons to appear in court on Monday, the 6th day of December, 1869, and show cause why executors' [illegible] should not then be allowed.

In the matter of the guardianship of Hannah Delschneider, minor heir of Joseph Delschneider; ordered that A. [illegible], Guardian, be authorized to pay off the debts by which the property of such minor heir is encumbered, so that such property may be sold and title given.

MAILS ON THE WEST SIDE.—The Salem Statesman of yesterday says: "We learn from Mr. Underwood, the Postal Agent, that he has earnestly recommended changes in the Postal service on the west side of the Willamette, which recommendations will doubtless be adopted, as Senator Williams has strongly endorsed the recommendations made, and Senator Corbett is well known to be in favor of them. The routes recommended are: From Salem to Eola, Independence via Monmouth, to Buena Vista, and back, tri-weekly; from Salem by Lincoln, [illegible] and Bethel, to Wheatland, weekly; from Portland by Forest Grove, Lafayette, McMinnville, Amity, Dallas, to Corvallis, six times a week. Mr. Underwood prepared his recommendations, expecting to have them reach [illegible] in time for new advertisements, but the publication was two months earlier than usual. They have been forwarded back by a strong letter from Senator Williams, and will be also urged by Senator Corbett. The route from Salem to Dallas will run, as now, to Dallas in the morning and return the same day.

GREAT FIRE AT SALEM—CAPITAL HOTEL BURNED.—We learn from Mr. B. A. Clarke, of the Statesman, who came down yesterday, that the "Capital Hotel" was destroyed by fire between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire originated in the kitchen, situated in the rear of the southeast wing, and when discovered, shortly after 12 o'clock, was blazing up to the very roof. A strong south wind was blowing, which carried the flames [illegible] and into the main building, which was enveloped and burning furiously in an incredibly short time. At the moment of discovery, the fire had made such headway as rendered it impossible to save the building or more than a small part of the furniture. The fire companies came out promptly, and by their efforts, prevented the spread of the flames to other buildings. Mr. Mallory's new fire proof brick, adjoining the hotel on the west, saved the buildings on that side. Mr. Mallory, the owner of the hotel, is loser to the amount of about $10,000, and Mr. Leininger, the lessee, loses in furniture about $1,500 above insurance.

DALLES.—From the Mountaineer of yesterday. The weather continues cold and pleasant. Ice and frost every night.

As Mr. Woodcock was coming down the Brewery Hill on Thursday morning the neck yoke broke, the horses became frightened and ran away, upsetting the wagon and Mr. W. in jumping from the wagon dislocated his shoulder and otherwise bruised himself.

An attempt was made to enter the store of Snyder & Liebe on Friday night, but the success of the burglar was prevented by Mr. Snyder leaping up from the arms of Morpheus and asking him what he wanted, whereupon he took quick French leave across the street and disappeared in the alley below Wentz' furniture store. Two hours later, Mr. Theodore Liebe was awakened from very [illegible] dreams by two persons entering the yard in the rear of Snyder & Liebe's bakery. On his appearance they both left and no traces could be found of them afterwards.

WHEN DID SHE SAIL?—We stated Monday morning that the Oriflamme sailed Saturday morning from San Francisco. The evening paper of Monday stated and re-[illegible] last evening that she sailed Monday afternoon. At the office of the N. P. T. Co., they say she sailed on Sunday. She will be here, probably, before people are done disputing about the time of her sailing.

ANOTHER ROBBERY.—Last Saturday evening, the house of Mr. T. J. Dryer was entered during his brief absence, by a burglar and thief, who rummaged the drawers of a bureau and stole therefrom $27 50—every cent of money the old gentleman had in the world. The money had just been paid him for doing a job of hard work. Considering his years and ill health, the loss to him is peculiarly a heavy one. The thief, if he were the lowest, meanest sneak that crawls, should be ashamed of the act, even if he has no compunctions of conscience for the crime of stealing. Let him go through life with the consciousness of having robbed an old man, poor and broken down by labor and ill health; and he must have in his own breast some foretaste of hell, unless too hardened for a touch of human feeling.

ORO FINO THEATER.—The play of "The Female Gambler" went off in first rate style last evening, though there was but a thin audience in front, and the farce of "Our Gal" brought down the house with laughter and applause. Mr. Potter received very complimentary applause, when, after the first play, he came before the curtain to announce the bill for this evening. He deserved it for his personation of Desmarets is excellent both in conception and execution.

To-night there will be an entire new attraction—no less than Maggie Mitchell's great five act drama of "Little Barefoot," which will be presented with all the accessories of new and appropriate scenery, costumes and properties.

1. Grand March Amazon
2. Long Branch Schottish.
3. Prison Song, from Travatore, by Verdi
4. Quadrille from the Opera Belle Helleue by Offenbach.
5. Polka Vive la Jolo by Albert
6. Come where my love lies dreaming Mendelsohn
7. New Empress Gallop
8. 23d Infantry March

REAL ESTATE SALE.—We call special attention again to the sale of lots and farms, to take place this morning at the salesroom of Mr. A. B. Richardson. The lots, in Johnson's Addition, are very handsomely located. A valuable tract of 80 acres, situated in the Canyon, within three-fourths of a mile of the city limits, and a farm of 320 acres, situated 12 miles from East Portland, are among the desirable outside tracts to be sold. For further particulars see Stitzel & Upton's and Richardson's advertisement.

PORK PACKING.—Passing the market of Spaulding & Cline, on North Front street, yesterday, we observed Mr. Johnson and Mr. Spaulding, with coats off, and sleeves rolled up, engaged in clearing the bones and marrow, etc., of a large pile of fat hogs. Mr. Johnson says from this time on the pork packing business goes on. We should say so, from the appearance of things yesterday.

PORTLAND HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION.—At the annual meeting held at the Council Chamber yesterday evening, the following officers were elected: R. R. Knapp, President; J. B. Congle, Vice President; Al. Zieber, I. S. Rosenbaum, I. P. W. Quimby, Trustees; L. J. Bullard, Secretary; Walter Moffitt, Treasurer.

NEW HOTEL FIRM.—Mr. Sprenger has taken into partnership with him in the "Cosmopolitan," Mr. H. C. Coulson, formerly County Clerk. If this don't make a popular firm, there is no sense in trying hereafter, to prophesy.

WATER COMPANY'S NOTICE.—The Portland Water Co. give notice to all who have hydrants in their houses to prepare their pipes against freezing, as the Company will abate nothing for non-supply while the mains are full.

NEW FIRM.—H. B. Oatman and Van B. DeLashmutt, have joined forces in the grocery and provision business, the "New England Bakery," etc., at the corner of First and Main streets. They will make a strong team.

THE RAILROAD IRON continues to arrive by hundreds of tons. The Webfoot having a locomotive on board is on her way to our city, and everything to facilitate the building of the great Railroad is progressing as well, as those Nonpareil Beaver Suits and those extra Seal-h Chinchilla "Roundabouts" are selling at KOHN & FISHEL'S, whose Stock of CLOTHING and GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS is the handsomest ever imported to Oregon, and their principle of selling with SMALL PROFITS proves a benefit to the public as well as to themselves. Their Stock of DRY GOODS is positively offered at COST.

SINGING SCHOOL.—Mr. Geo. A. Buchanan will open his singing school on Wednesday evening next, at Cardinell's dancing hall, over J. W. Breck's store, Front street, between Yamhill and Taylor.

Use KANE'S IMPERIAL CONDENSED SOAP. It washes without rubbing. For sale by Allen & Lewis, Corbitt & McCleay, R. G. Sneath and all retailers.

FRESHEST GLEANINGS.

It is said that 121 vessels were sunk or beached on the coast of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by the recent tidal wave.

The President has been in the receipt of several letters from prominent men in the South, asking that he make a trip through the Southern States in the early part of November. He has replied that if his public duties will permit he will visit the Atlantic seaboard States, but that he fears that his presence will be required in Washington during the most of November.

A gentleman absent from Nashville on a business journey received a dispatch from home to this effect: "Your wife had a child last night, but is doing well to-day." He hurried home with very various emotions, to find that there was a mistake. The nurse who signed the dispatch had written "chil," and the operator knowing full well that a letter was missing from the word, guessed that it should end with a d.

An old iron kettle, greatly rust-eaten, containing old Dutch coins, a knife and fork of exceedingly rude manufacture, and some Delft crockery, was unearthed, the other day, by workmen engaged in digging for the foundation of the new Government pier at the Battery, New York. It was doubtless buried or thrown away during the occupancy of Manhattan Island by the Knickerbockers. The antique relics are to be presented to the New York Historical Society.

Lippincott's Magazine is authority for stating that at the time of the first issue of greenbacks Mr. Chase consulted, among others, with the president of a Philadelphia bank, as to placing some motto upon the bills, as "In God we Trust" has been stamped upon some of the coins. After mentioning several scriptural texts that had occurred to him, the Secretary asked the banker's opinion. "Perhaps," was the reply, "the most appropriate would be, 'Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have I give thee.'" The project was not carried further.

THE WEST.

About 200 men are said be in the Loon creek mines.

Gov. Ashley, of Montana, has been canoeing it on Clarke's Fork of the Columbia, and killing much game.

Bids for erecting a penitentiary at Boise City have been forwarded to Washington. The lowest bid is about $35,000.

Two men have been arrested at Owyhee charged with stealing mine tanks of quicksilver. It is not stated whether any quartz crushers are missing or not.

The Poorman mine, at a depth of fifty feet below the 400-foot level, where a drift is run six feet each way from the shaft, shows better evidence of permanence than it ever did above.

In a recent fight between the Crows and Sioux, in Dakota, the Crows lost six warriors. They claim to have punished the Sioux much more severely, and are reported to be "well satisfied."

The Walla Walla Union gives its local cotemporary the following notice: Wm. H. Newell and another bottle of gin have "gone from our midst like a beautiful dream"—gone to Olympia to throw their heft against the division of the county.

STEAM POWER, NOS. 682 AND 684 FRONT ST.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best quality, CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive only after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the [illegible], the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and put on their guard against this practice.

The Mountain Heart's-Ease.

By scattered rocks and turbid waters shifting,
By furrowed glade and dell,
To feverish men thy calm, sweet face uplifting,
Thou stayest them to tell.

The delicate thought, that cannot find expression,
For ruder speech too fair,
That, like thy petals, trembles in possession
And scatters on the air.

The miner pauses in his rugged labor,
And, leaning on his spade,
Laughingly calls unto his comrade neighbor
To see thy charms displayed;

But in his eyes a mist unwonted rises,
And for a moment clear,
Some sweet home face his foolish thought surprises
And passes in a tear—

Some boyish vision of his Eastern village,
Of uneventful toil,
Where golden harvests followed quiet tillage

One moment, only, for the pick, uplifting,
Through root and fibre cleaves,
And on the muddy current slowly drifting
Are swept thy bruised leaves.

And yet, O poet, in thy homely fashion,
Thy work thou dost fulfil,
For on the turbid current of his passion
Thy face is smiling still!

—F. Bret Harte in Overland Monthly.

A Romance in Real Life.

That "truth is stranger than fiction" was forcibly illustrated by the brief history of two persons which culminated recently at the Astor House in New York and is thus related by the Evening Mail:

About twenty-two years ago Mr. M., a Northern gentleman, married a Miss N., of this State. To all appearances it was what the world denominated 'a happy marriage.' About one year after this union, Mrs. M. presented her husband with a fine boy, whose appearance seemed to be an additional living and breathing bond of affection. The 'happy couple' lived together for about ten years, when by a reverse of circumstances in Mr. M.'s business, over which he had no control, he became quite poor. Passing over details, suffice it to say that a divorce criminating neither party was easily obtained in a court of one of those States, whose loose laws now offer inducements to the discontented to violate the solemn ordinance of marriage with impunity. But this was not a trap sprung by one party without the knowledge of the other. It was a mutual divorce.

Mrs. M. was a healthy, fine looking woman, and in a few years became the wife of a well-to-do gentleman. This was a happy marriage throughout. The second husband died a little more than a year ago, leaving the widow a small fortune of twenty thousand dollars.

During these eight or nine years of life with her second husband, the lady did not forget her first born; nor did the son lose sight of the mother. The affection in both was strong. The boy was the divine magnet which attracted the divorced and widowed mother and the wandering father from his search for business and happiness in distant Costa Rica. At the death of the second husband the son had reached the manly age of twenty. Imagine his feelings as he came to realize the situation of his father and mother. One a single man, the other a widow. One unhappy [illegible] still without sufficient worldly goods to make life worth living for; the other the recipient of a husbandless life with a plentiful larder. Ever present was the thought that one yet lived whom she had a right before God to love and cherish. He was the father of her son. The son, who loved his mother, loved his father not less. The mother could not gaze into the face of her only born, without beholding the image of his father. Time passed. The son brought his divorced father and widowed mother together. They talked over the past. They agreed upon the future. The boy was the center of attraction. He was flesh of their flesh, bone of their bone. The ties of nature were too strong for resistance. Like two drops of quicksilver the two hearts united. Yesterday, in this city, the son had the happiness to celebrate the anniversary of his twenty-first birthday by witnessing the extraordinary scene of the marriage of his own father and mother! This was joy enough for one day. History probably does not afford the parallel of this truthful picture.

Mr. and Mrs. M., accompanied by their son and several friends, dined at the Astor House yesterday afternoon, and afterwards left for Boston on their bridal tour to enjoy his second and her third 'honeymoon.' The son who is a promising, fine-looking young man is a telegraph operator of excellent abilities and employed in this city.

After their 'honeymoon,' Mr. and Mrs. M., with their son, will visit Costa Rica, where the past business experience of Mr. M. in that country, with the little capital of Mrs. M. and the profession of the talented and enterprising son will undoubtedly prove the foundation for a greater and more permanent fortune. May happiness and prosperity go with them.

Archæological Discoveries in Cochin-China.—The ruins which have been discovered in Cambodia (says the Revue Coloniale et Maritime) prove that the inhabitants must at one time have been as highly civilized as they are now debased. Remains of sculpture has been discovered rivalling those produced in Greece in its best days. The ruling principle which dominated every other is supposed to have been a religious one, but this did not prevent the government from paying attention to material matters calculated to benefit the people by adding to their comfort and promoting their commerce. Magnificent roads are met which appear to run deep into the interior of the country, and besides these roads, at certain distances apart, large sheets of water were formed for the use, as is supposed, of the caravans which conveyed the merchandise, such as the elephant and buffalo, requiring frequent baths, and the country being so parched during several months by the great heat that the small streams, ponds and shallow lakes are dried up.

Well built bridges have been discovered in many parts, and the expedition conducted by M. Lagrée found remains of the same and other constructions as far as the fifteenth degree of north latitude. So extensive and numerous are these remains that they are considered to prove beyond dispute that at the time when they were built the country must have been densely populated by people rich and prosperous to a very high degree; indeed there is positive evidence of the fact in the writings of a Chinese traveler, who speaks with warm admiration of the lavish manner in which gold was employed in the decorations of their monuments.

The successors of those who created these monuments are now few in comparison in the French territory of Cochin-China. Driven back from the mouths of the great river which gave them access to the sea by the Annamites, and from the upper valley of Cambodia by the Laothians, as far back as the 14th degree on the right bank and the 15th on the left bank, and being moreover divided between the Government of France and Siam, and only a portion of them retaining their own sovereign, whose rule, and that of their chiefs, is described as in no way calculated to revive their ancient civilization and prosperity, they seem to have lost heart, and it is only occasionally that their innate energy is roused so far as to induce them to escape from the oppression to which they are subjected by taking refuge in the forests.

How far indolence of their character may be attributed to the oppressiveness of the Governments they live under, it is, of course, impossible to say, but a saddening idea of this distinguishing feature is derived by travelers from the uncultivated state of the country. Vast districts so fertile and so situated that immense crops of almost every kind could be grown in them, are suffered to lie fallow year after year, and this is not because hands are wanting to cultivate the land, but because they prefer living in a state of misery and wretchedness to making the exertion necessary to raise themselves out of it, persuaded as they are, that if they managed to accumulate any stable property, they would involve themselves in possible danger and certain robbery by the mandarins who govern them. The little relations they still have with the countries outside of their territory they owe to the Chinese, who conduct the commerce and the Annamites, who enjoy the highly remunerative monopoly of the fishing.

The condition of those who live under the rule of the Siamese is described as being much better than that of those who live under the native rule. This is attributed to the terrible chastisement which followed every attempt to throw off the yoke to which they were subjected, until at last they become convinced of the futility of such attempts, and set to work to make the best of the opportunities that still remained to them. The entire race is described as inevitably doomed to destruction from the encroachment of the Chinese, Annamites and Europeans, just as the magnificence of their former greatness are from the gnawing decay.

The Southwest in 1862.

BRAXTON BRAGG'S REPORT OF HIS CAMPAIGN IN TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY—WHAT HE HOPED TO ACCOMPLISH.

(From the Detroit (Mich.) Post.)

Gen. Trowbridge, of this city, has a report, which was made by Gen. Braxton Bragg to Gen. Cooper, in May, 1863, giving an account of operations in Kentucky and Tennessee during the previous autumn. The report never reached its destination, but was captured by troops under Gen. Trowbridge, among other military papers and stores. It is quite interesting, as giving the rebel view of a campaign that was disastrous to our troops, yet not altogether fortunate to the Confederates, nor creditable to the Generalship of either army. No portion of the report has before this been published. The opening portion, which gives an account of the rebel advance as far as Bowling Green, and of the capture of Mumfordsville, is as follows:

"Constant occupation and the absence of my records, during the active service in this quarter, have prevented until now a full narrative of the events incident to the campaign of this army last autumn, in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Early in July, 1862, under instructions, a division of the troops under Maj. Gen. McCowen was sent from my headquarters at Tupelo, Miss., to the Department of East Tennessee. In the latter part of that month it became evident that we were being pressed there by a heavy corps of the enemy sent from Corinth, under Maj. Gen. Buell. This movement threatened the very heart of our country, and was destined, unless checked immediately, to sever our main line of connection between the East and West. At this time the army in Mississippi had much improved in health and strength, and had progressed rapidly in discipline, organization and instruction. Leaving a sufficient force, I determined to move to Chattanooga, oppose the dangerous operation of the enemy, and, if practicable, drive him from our important provision country in North Alabama, Middle Tennessee and Kentucky. Early in August the infantry force for this purpose—four divisions—was concentrated near Chattanooga, and awaited the arrival of the artillery and baggage train, which necessarily moved across the country by land.

Maj. Gen. E. Kirby Smith, commanding the Department of East Tennessee, met me by invitation at Chattanooga, and most generously placed his whole command at my disposal. It was soon determined, upon his suggestion, that all his forces should be used to operate upon the enemy's left at Cumberland Gap, and he was requested to confer with Brig. Gen. Humphrey Marshall, commanding in southwestern Virginia, with whom he was already in correspondence, to secure his co-operation also in the movement. After returning to Knoxville General Smith asked for further assistance, and two fine brigades, under Brigadier General J. R. Chalmers and Colonel Preston Smith, were sent to him, in addition to the division which had gone from Tupelo. The balance of my immediate command, the army of the Mississippi, divided between Maj. Gens. Polk and Hardee, made every preparation, and awaited only its baggage train and artillery to cross the Tennessee river, and enter upon its perilous and arduous campaign over the mountains dividing East and Middle Tennessee. The movement of the artillery and wagons across the mountain region of North Alabama having been successfully accomplished late in August, we commenced crossing the river at Chattanooga with very limited means. The enemy, with a largely superior force, occupied the lines of the railroad from Decatur to Bridgeport, Ala., from Decatur to Nashville, and from Nashville to Stephenson, with large detached commands at McMinnville and Cumberland Gap. Having crossed the river at Chattanooga, the column took up its line of march on the 28th of August over Waldson's Ridge and the Cumberland Mountains, for Middle Tennessee. Maj. Gen. Smith had already successfully passed through Northeastern Tennessee, and gained the rear of Cumberland Gap, held by the enemy in strong force, well fortified. Leaving a sufficient force to hold the enemy in observation, his dislodgment being considered impracticable, he moved as authorized with the balance of his command on Lexington. This rich country, full of supplies so necessary to us, was represented to be occupied by a force which could make but a feeble resistance. How well and successfully that duty was performed has already been reported by Gen. Smith. His complete victory over the enemy at Richmond, Ky., and his occupation of Lexington, rendered it necessary for me to intercept General Buell, now rapidly moving toward Nashville, or to move toward the right so as to secure a junction with General Smith when necessary. On reaching Middle Tennessee it was found that the enemy's main force had concentrated in Nashville, and was strongly fortified. My force was thrown rapidly to Glasgow, Ky., and to my great satisfaction reached that point the 13th of September, before any portion of the enemy passed Bowling Green. As soon as my object was discovered the enemy moved in haste, but reached Bowling Green only in time to find that we had seized and now held both roads near Cave City.

Prepared to assail Buell's force should he attempt to pass north, I determined to rest my jaded troops at Glasgow, where some subsistence was to be had. While thus engaged, I learned that the command of my outpost brigade at Cave City had advanced upon and assailed the enemy's fortified position at Mumfordsville, and after a gallant fight against largely superior numbers had been repulsed with considerable loss. Unwilling to allow the impression of a disaster to rest on the minds of my men, the force was rapidly prepared and put in motion on the evening of the 15th, with a very scanty supply of provisions.

Hardee's wing moved by Cave City direct upon Mumfordsville, and Polk, by the Bear Willow road, crossed the river some miles to the right, and gained the enemy's rear in the afternoon of the 16th. An immediate demand of the surrender of the garrison was made, and after a few hours negotiation, an unconditional surrender was obtained. We secured 4,267 prisoners, ten pieces of artillery, 5,000 small arms, and a proportional quantity of ammunition and stores. This surrender having been secured, dispositions were made for an attack on Gen. Buell's main force, supposed to be advancing from Bowling Green. Efforts were made to draw him to an attack by manœuvering a division on his front, while our main force held position south of the intrenchments on Green River. I failed to accomplish this object. With my effective force reduced by sickness, exhaustion, and the recent affair at Mumfordsville, to half that of the enemy, I could not prudently afford to attack him in his selected position. Should I pursue him further toward Bowling Green, he might fall back to that place and behind his fortifications.

Reduced at the end of four days to three days' rations, and in a hostile country, utterly destitute of supplies, a serious engagement, brought on anywhere in that direction, could not fail to materially (whatever its result) cripple me. The loss of battle would be eminently disastrous. We were therefore compelled to give up the object and seek for subsistence. Orders were sent for a supply train from a depot at Lexington, to meet us at Bardstown, and the march was commenced at the latter place. Instruction had been given Gen. Smith for a simultaneous movement of a column at Lexington to Shelbyville, that combined operations might be immediately undertaken against Louisville. Orders had also been given for a close observation of the enemy at the Cumberland Gap, and that he should be intercepted in any attempt to escape. On my arrival at Bardstown I learned from Maj. Gen. Smith, then at Lexington, that the enemy was moving from Cumberland Gap, advancing to escape to the valley of Sandy river, to eastern Kentucky, and that he had sent his whole available force in pursuit. A sufficient force to prevent his escape and to hold the enemy in check there and to compel his surrender had been ordered, and was confidently expected from another quarter, to have followed Gen. Smith's movements in time for this purpose. Circumstances unknown to me in our isolated position, and over which I could exercise no control, had prevented this consummation, so confidently relied on, and so necessary to our success. The delay necessarily resulting from the pursuit of the enemy by Gen. Smith, prevented a juncture of our forces and enabled General Buell to reach Louisville before the assault could be made on that city."

The report then goes on to state that the troops at Bardstown, being much jaded and foot sore, were placed in position for rest, while Gen. Bragg went to Lexington to confer with Gen. Smith. Gen. Polk, left at Bardstown in command, was directed, if pressed by a force too large to justify his giving battle, to fall back in the direction of a new depot of supplies near Bryantsville, in front of which Gen. Bragg proposed to concentrate for action. On the 3d of October Gen. Bragg sent orders to Gen. Polk "to move from Bardstown with his whole available force, by way of Bloomfield, toward Frankfort, to strike the enemy in the flank and rear, at the same time informing him that Gen. Smith would attack in front. Gen. Polk, instead of obeying this order, took counsel from the division officers, and determined to move as originally commanded. This decision of Polk's disconcerted Bragg, compelled him to abandon his whole previous plan of attack, and to relinquish the capital, and led to the partial uncovering and subsequent total loss of his stores at Lexington. On the 6th October Gens. Bragg and Polk met at Harrodsburg, when the former learned nothing from Gen. Polk to justify the change of plan. He therefore tried to resume his former plan, and to concentrate his forces in front of Lexington. Before this could be done, however, information was received that the Union forces were moving in separate columns, scattered over a line of at least sixty miles. "This," says Gen. Bragg, "presented an opportunity which I promptly seized, of attacking him in detail." He accordingly gave orders to Gen. Polk to attack immediately, but his orders were again disregarded, until he came up in person, when he put the troops in motion. The battle of Perryville followed, of which the report gives a brief account.

Of the movement after the close of this battle, Gen. Bragg says: "We had entire possession of the battle field, with thousands of the enemy's killed and wounded, several batteries of artillery, and 600 prisoners. In the progress of the engagement we had advanced so far as to expose our left flank to the Third Corps, just arrived from the direction of Lebanon. I, therefore, caused our line, which rested on the field, to fall back to its original position. Assured that the enemy had concentrated his three corps against us, and finding that our loss had been quite heavy in the unequal contest, against two, I gave the orders to fall back at daylight on Harrodsburg."

He then states that, having joined forces with Gen. Smith, he offered the Union forces battle, but was declined. Then, as the Union forces destroyed all the mills from which his army obtained breadstuffs, he had no alternative except "to attack and rout the enemy, largely superior in numbers, or to evacuate the country in which we could no longer subsist." He chose the latter alternative, and, after a rapid march, passed Cumberland Gap, "with immaterial loss, from the 18th to the 24th of October," and thus closed the campaign, the account of which Gen. Bragg winds up as follows:

"In four weeks after passing Cumberland Gap, in our advance on this memorable and arduous campaign, jaded, hungry and ragged, this noble army was found with serried ranks in front of the enemy at Nashville, better organized, better disciplined, better clothed and fed, in better tone and health, and in larger numbers, than when it had entered the campaign, though it had made a march at least three times as long as that of the enemy in reaching the same point, and was, moreover, well sustained. Too high an estimate cannot be placed upon officers and men capable of such fortitude and resolution, courage and self-denial."

Adventure with the French Police.

And extract from a private letter is given in the Providence Journal, narrating a ludicrous adventure with the French police, experienced by a couple of American ladies and some little American girls, in a town near Paris. The letter says.

One day Elise sent for me in haste. Roberta, who had remained with her during Nina's illness, which, you know, was typhoid fever, had received official notice that a letter, containing suspicious matter, directed to her, was detained at the office of police, and that she must appear within twenty-four hours and answer to the same, under pain of arrest. I had gone to Paris for something for Nina, so Lucy arose from the bed and went with the child to the office. There was a letter, directed in a disguised hand and containing lumps of something hard. They were required to tell, from the outside, from whom the letter was, and the nature of the lumps, and without squeezing the latter, for fear of explosion. They being unequal to the task, the officers consulted, and finally required the said Roberta, to make affidavit that she was Roberta, and both of them to swear that they knew nothing of the letter, its source or contents, and then to open the same in the presence of the Prefect of Police and the gens d'armes.

It proved to be from Meta, who cut off from intercourse with her friend, on account of Nina's illness, had put her feelings on paper. A naturally erratic handwriting was made more illegible by grief; besides, Meta was rather foggy as to the proper method of directing a letter in French. All these things had combined with Roberta's terror to prevent previous recognition of the source whence the letter came. Lucy, under oath then translated the document and explained the circumstance. But there remained the hard substances, amber-colored, and semi-transparent, angular, shapeless, and unexplained by anything in the body of the letter. Lucy was at fault; but the terrified and weeping Roberta, between her sobs, suggested rock candy. Such it proved to be, when tasted by one of the gens d'armes, who was experimented on. For Lucy refused to taste it and prove it such, when it was handed to her by the Prefect for that purpose, stating that she would have done it before he had handled it, but now she would not, as she did not think his hands looked clean. And the Prefect had also refused, apparently thinking his own life too valuable to risk with possible poisons. Lucy gave the audience a piece of her mind as to the police of France. She said such a thing could not happen in any other country in the world; and wound up by telling the Prefect that she pitied a man of his years for being subject to a Government which could put him in an attitude so ridiculous, and then bore off Roberta, Meta's letter, and the rock candy. Elise was relieved to find that the summons was not to inform them that typhoid fever was against the law in France, and instantly rose from the depths of despair to the hights of hilarity.

Clerical Egotists.—Clerical speakers are not behindhand herein; and this is natural. As they have to create their own topics, and, independently of outward occasion, to excite interest in their topics, the process of composing a sermon must be a continual process of self concentration and of self-exhaustion. It is not surprising that the ego should be continually expressed. Then the speech itself is guarded from contradiction, and secured against open criticism: the pulpit, separate from the body of the church, not only in locality but in idea, is sacred against outspoken objection; and the words of the sermon, falling upon the stillness of reverential silence, are only less sacred than those of the Bible. He has no open combatant or rival, by whom his force may be tested. The poor, neglected actor has to silence the groanings of his heart, while the shouts of rapture hail the demigod of the night. If any vain illusion gives the despised one hope, theatrical audiences are not guilty of deception. So, in the contests of the law, the orator takes high position only through victory over opposition. But the feeblest preacher that ever drained away the sublimity of his text may mistake his isolated personal intensity for force. The gentleness with which the devoutly meek listen to him he may consider impression; and the stolid firmness with which the inattentatively reflective seem to listen he may suppose conviction. Then the good man at the end is tired and triumphant. No one tells him definitely, and often he will not think differently, in spite of all that events declare too plainly and too severely.

How naturally, then, does the preacher, who works hard and earnestly, think, without ordinary means and comparison, that he works with eloquence and power; how natural that he should rejoice in the illusion! "Ah, you were not in church to-day," said a preacher to a friend, whom he met after service coming in an opposite direction. "No, sir." "I am sorry," replied the clergyman, "for I never in my life preached better. Oh, it is hard to move these rich fellows; but sometimes a man can shake the hearts in them. My friend you should have heard my sermon this morning on Dives and Lazarus!" But egotism in strong preachers is even strengthened with their strength. There is no man whose personality attracts so much the personality of others toward him as does that of the popular preacher. His personality is thus turned back upon him, through the kaleidoscope of a manifold reflection from the admiring personalities of others, with a warmth and intensity of coloring which no other orator ever calls so constantly into play. Struggling thus with his own personality and with the personalities about him, the moments of his emancipation from both must seem to him as miracles from heaven.—Atlantic Monthly.

W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. B. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering [illegible] ones from the effects of secret indulgence [illegible] absorbed into the system. Look at their [illegible] ted and disfigured faces and their broken [illegible] tions, disqualifying them for the happiness or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid [illegible] thousands suffer until death closes the [illegible] guardians, friends, attend to those who are any of these horrible life destroying [illegible] they are cared for and cured before it [illegible] them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, [illegible] made private disease his specialty [illegible] is certain to cure the most inveterate cases [illegible] cury or any injurious drugs. It is [illegible] who are afflicted, or to those who are [illegible] welfare of their friends, to be careful of [illegible] tended doctors who infest all cities, [illegible] In curing all diseases in a few days, [illegible] public by using the names of eminent [illegible] Europe and other places. Be therefore [illegible] strict inquiry or you may fall into the [illegible] charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence by the youth of both sexes to an alarming [illegible] producing, with unerring certainty, [illegible] of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by [illegible] ical measures, viz: Sallow countenance [illegible] the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the [illegible] the rustling of leaves and rattling of [illegible] about the loins, weakness of the limbs [illegible] blunted intellect, loss of confidence [illegible] proaching strangers, a dislike to form [illegible] a disposition to shun society, loss of [illegible] flushes; pimples and various eruptions [illegible] furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, [illegible] sweats, monomania and frequently [illegible] not obtained, should apply immediately [illegible] or by letter, and have a cure effected [illegible] entific mode of treating this disease [illegible] effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G [illegible] Hundred Dollars to any person who will [illegible] rily to him that he was cured of [illegible] of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who [illegible] under any of these fearful maladies, [illegible] sacred responsibility resting upon [illegible] obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and [illegible] patient a written instrument, binding [illegible] radical and permanent cure, or make no [illegible]

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be cured by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, [illegible] toms, length of time the disease has [illegible] medicines promptly forwarded, free from curiosity, to any part of the country, with directions for use, for Ten Dollars, [illegible] ter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, [illegible] Some of the self-styled doctors, whose [illegible] found in the daily and weekly newspapers [illegible] cisco and other places, are tradesmen [illegible] lazy to work at their trades. Some are [illegible] taskers, newspaper carriers, intelligence [illegible] etc. Look over the San Francisco [illegible] will not find their Medical Institutes [illegible] find their former occupations in the [illegible] tory for 1862 and 1863. The only way is [illegible] tion is to make enquiry—it will cost you [illegible] may save you many regrets, for, as [illegible] cians in eight cases out of ten, are bogus, [illegible] safety in trusting any of them until you [illegible] what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not [illegible] exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, [illegible] letters, etc. Dr. Gibbon will satisfy [illegible] cal, at his office of his ability to treat [illegible] proposes to cure.
